

New COVID-19 Treatment Available

You have been tested for Coronavirus with a COVID-19 PCR test. If your COVID-19 PCR test is positive, you may be eligible for monoclonal antibody treatment. This is a one hour IV infusion of a man-made blood protein that fights the Coronavirus. You can learn more here: <https://www.covid19treatmentguidelines.nih.gov/>.

To receive this treatment, you must:

1. Have a positive COVID test result
2. Have mild to moderate symptoms that do NOT require hospitalization or increased oxygen support
3. Have symptoms for LESS than 10 days
4. Not be breastfeeding or pregnant
5. Be 12 years old or older and >40 Kg (88 lb)

How to be referred for treatment:

After you test positive for COVID-19, your primary care provider will help determine if you meet criteria for the treatment, and offer further instructions based on where you live and where you are receiving care.

If eligible, your primary care provider can then complete your referral form:
